

WHOSE LINE IS IT, ANYWAY?

Every story has to start somewhere. The first sentence of a book sets the tone for the rest of the story and gives the reader a clue about where the story will go next. Can you guess which book it is, just by the first line?

How to Play:

1. Choose one player to be the Reader, who will read aloud the first sentence of one Read Local Challenge book. (You do not need to go in order - choose whichever book you think will stump everyone!)
2. Players call out their guesses when they think they know the answer. First player to guess the correct title gets three (3) points. (Add one bonus point if they also know the author!)
3. If no one knows the answer, Reader may give the 1-line book blurb as a clue. A correct guess after one clue is given earns two (2) points (no bonus points awarded after clues are given).
4. If no one knows the answer after the 1-line book blurb is given, Reader may give the full book description as a clue. A correct answer after two clues earns one (1) point.
5. If players still can't guess the correct answer, Reader gets a point. They will announce the answer, and then move on to the next book, starting again by just reading the first sentence of the chosen Read Local Challenge book.

Bonus Game: FIRST SENTENCES

First sentences are brimming with promises and possibilities. In the hands of a different author, the same first sentence might lead to a completely different story!

Play the First Sentences game and test your creativity.

Will your story be serious or silly?

Funny or frightening?

Merry or melancholy?

Try writing your own story with just the information you see here: the book title (& author), a description of the book, and the first sentence.

How is your story similar to the one the author told? How is it different?

You can play the First Sentences game alone or with a group of friends. The more people you have playing, the funnier your stories will probably get, so grab twenty or thirty of your closest friends!

How to Play:

1. Sit in a circle, so you can all see each other.
2. Pick someone to go first (the Story Starter). This could be the youngest member of your group, or the one whose birthday is coming up next, or the one whose first name sounds closest to the author's name.
3. The Story Starter reads the book title, author's name, and the paragraph about the book to the group. Then, they read first sentence aloud to the whole group, and add a sentence of their own to continue the story.
4. The next player adds a new sentence, and so on around the circle, as many times around as necessary, until you have a complete story.
